

COURSE TITLE: SW 503: Social Work and Sport
TERM: WINTER 2017
DATES: Friday, March 10 and Saturday, March 18, 2017
TIME: 9 am to 5 pm
INSTRUCTORS:
Warren Clark, MSW, LMSW - clarkw@umich.edu
Bill Vanderwill, LMSW, ACSW, LMFT, BCD - wmvand@umich.edu

1. COURSE DESCRIPTION

A growing body of research documents the positive health and mental health benefits of participating in organized sports. While much of the current research is focused on youth participation in sports, there is also evidence of how participation in sports can benefit people across the life span and from different ethnic and socioeconomic groups. This 2 day mini-course will discuss how social work values, concepts, and interventions on both the micro and macro levels can enhance sport activities. Specific strategies such as strength-based coaching, teambuilding, conflict resolution, family collaboration, diversity training, community engagement, advocacy and policy development will be discussed. Model interdisciplinary programs that serve at-risk youth, older adults, individuals with disabilities and other special populations will be highlighted. The application of macro social work practice will focus on the “pay to play” issue, anti-bullying initiatives, use of social media, childhood obesity prevention, community organization and global social work. Clinical social work concepts from Systems Theory, Cognitive Behavioral Therapy, Solution-Focused strategies, and Adventure Therapy and other models will be discussed as tools to enhance self-esteem, youth development, sports performance and promote the prevention of dangerous behaviors.

2. COURSE CONTENT

Since this is a mini-course, it is not possible to examine each topic in detail. We will provide an introduction to each topic, including suggested readings and resources. Through brief lectures, discussion, video presentations, and group projects, students will apply social work competencies including, assessment, engagement, intervention, critical thinking, evaluation and professional behavior. Guest lecturers will highlight practice issues, resources and trends in the field.

3. COURSE OBJECTIVES

Students who complete the mini-course will be able to:

- Discuss the value of micro and macro social work theory and practice in sport activities
- Explicate the relevance of social work values and ethics to promote socially just services and programs
- Identify the protective factors of sports in the areas of psychosocial development, physical health and self-esteem
- Define the concept of strength-based coaching
- Discuss the importance of teambuilding, conflict resolution and diversity training
- Identify key issues regarding parental involvement in sports
- Describe the needs of special populations in sports - individuals with disabilities, LGBT youth and older adults
- Apply macro interventions of community engagement, advocacy and policy development to sport activities
- Identify model interdisciplinary programs, global initiatives and trends in this emerging social work practice area

4. RELATIONSHIP OF THE COURSE TO CURRICULAR THEMES

Multiculturalism and Diversity will be addressed by discussing the need for cultural humility and inclusion in sport activities. Lecture content and group activities will address the important factors in creating strength-based programs for diverse populations, including individuals with disabilities, older adults and LGBT youth.

Social Justice and Social Change will be addressed by discussing the importance of making sports available to all people regardless of age, ability, gender, sexual identity, social economic class or ethnic background. Model interdisciplinary programs will be highlighted. The use of macro social work skills such as, advocacy, community organization strategies and legislative initiatives will be presented.

Promotion, Prevention, Treatment and Rehabilitation will be addressed by discussing the positive outcomes of sport activities such as, protective factors, positive youth development, resiliency, and the enhancement of self-esteem. Social work intervention strategies that promote growth throughout the lifecycle will be highlighted.

Behavioral and Social Science Research will be presented throughout this mini-course including findings from social work, psychology, sociology, counseling, anthropology, and education.

Social Work Ethics and Values will examine the many issues within the field of sports and the implications for social work practice will be an important component of this mini-course.

5. COURSE REQUIREMENTS

A. Academic Conduct and Integrity

Please refer to the Student Code of Academic and Professional Conduct in the Student Guide to the Master's in Social work Degree Program for a discussion of student responsibilities for academic conduct and integrity.

B. Attendance and Participation

Attendance for the entire class and active participation is required. In consideration of your classmates, please arrive on time and turn off your cell phone. Please do not text-message, read your e-mail, surf the Internet, etc. during class.

Accommodations for Students with Disabilities

If you need accommodation for a disability or any other special need, please let me know so that we can work on the necessary arrangements.

Religious Observances

Please notify us if religious observances conflict with any part of the class so that we can make appropriate arrangements.

C. Assignments

Students who are enrolled for credit will complete the following assignments:

- Participation in class activities and discussions
- Completion of the two course assignments. Details will be provided in a separate handout
- Attendance for the entire class

Assignments will be distributed in class in separate handouts. Students will upload the two assignments to the SW 503 Canvas site.

Continuing Education students are required to attend the entire class and participate in discussion and group activities.

D. Grading

Grading for the mini-course is satisfactory/unsatisfactory and is based on attendance, participation in class activities and successful completion of the two course assignments. Letter grades are available for the undergraduate students.

MODEL PROGRAMS

Columbia University of International and Public Affairs and Nike

http://sipa.columbia.edu/academics/concentrations/epd/documents/Final_Report_Ashoka_Columbia.pdf

Columbia University School of International and Public Affairs and Nike—Soccer program for girls in the Middle East. In 2007, after successfully completing the partnership's pilot phase, we developed and extended our partnership with Nike for another three years. It has now grown to support a total of eleven projects in Egypt, Morocco, and Palestine, including the expansion of three of the original projects. The successful implementation of these projects, and the tangible impacts they have had on the communities they serve, prove the effective, innovative nature of sports used as a tool for social change and, specifically, gender empowerment.

Bringing girls together to play soccer, or enabling women to pursue physical fitness, appears recreational and fun on the surface, and this is an important benefit, but, in the Arab region, it also challenges entrenched social norms. It changes the way girls and women view themselves and their own potential, and it changes the way they see their role in society. Through sports we can help women and girls to have a space for free expression, where they can build self-esteem, develop leadership skills and strengthen social relationships.

.....”They’ll offer a menu of thought-provoking topics ranging from student-athletes’ rights to racial, gender and physical equality.

“The ‘social justice’ theme is a timely topic, and we had an easy time attracting speakers,” said Scott Kretchmar, who has chaired the Colloquium’s editorial and advisory board since the event was first staged at the 2008 NCAA Convention. “In fact, with so many social justice issues out there, the committee had a hard time deciding what to allocate a major session to.”

<http://sscnlondon.org.uk>

The purpose of SSCN London is to build partnerships and coordinate efforts to accelerate the growth and increase the quality and sustainability of the sport for social change movement in London.

This is a unique initiative that has been developed by four founding partners – Active Communities Network, the Community Action Zone, Nike and the Mayor of London – with the intention of ensuring that Londoners of all ages and abilities have easy access to a range of sporting opportunities. It was borne out of a shared belief in the power of sport to make a difference to peoples’ lives; and also by a commitment to helping the thousands of people and organizations who dedicate their time and effort to creating sporting opportunity for others.

Sports are a Global Tool for Social Change

For many people in the world, the United Nations brings to mind a picture of Security Council negotiations and debates over weighty international problems like nuclear proliferation.

Still, if you pull back the curtain of mystique, you see an unexpected variety of UN programs changing lives in practical but important ways. On a daily basis, UN programs collaborate with governments, the private sector, and other partners to improve health, education, and living standards around the world.

The Interdisciplinary Electronic Journal of African Sports - Ohio University

We welcome our network of readers, among them scholars, policy-makers, research scientists, educators, and coaches worldwide to this second issue of The Interdisciplinary Electronic Journal of African Sports, which is devoted to the study of sport and social change. The contributors to this issue come from sport management and sport development fields. Their papers focus on Kenya, Morocco and Senegal and provide original insights into how the contemporary human condition is related to sports. The authors write from the perspectives of outsiders, reading the changing African condition through sport organization, practice, and discourse. Individually and collectively, these papers highlight the ways in which sport in Africa is influenced by economic forces, political factors, and cultural practices.

United States Power Soccer Association

Power Soccer is a sport developed specifically for those who use power wheel chairs. According to the United States Power Soccer Association, "Athletes' disabilities include quadriplegia, multiple sclerosis, muscular dystrophy, cerebral palsy, and many others." The game is similar in format to outdoor soccer, but is played indoors on a basketball court. "Two teams of four players attack defend, and spin-kick a 13-inch soccer ball in a skilled and challenging game similar to able-bodied soccer."

While relatively new, Power Soccer is played all over the globe, and every four years there's a world cup - which Team USA won in 2007. The athletes involved have varying levels of physical handicaps; some are 100% dependent on others when out of their wheelchair. And in similar fashion to "the beautiful game," Power Soccer not only gives these athletes an outlet to express themselves through sport, but also a way to meet people and make new friends.
