Method Area: Social Policy, Community Organizing and Interpersonal Practice

Course Description:

This mini-course focuses on the real community and personal impacts of increased immigration enforcement in the United States since the attacks of 911. The course will explore current immigration enforcement policies in the context of social justice issues, human rights violations and impacts on communities. Many of these issues will be explored through particular focus on case examples from an effective, local, grassroots effort to urgently respond to the needs of the undocumented immigrant individuals and families who are increasingly targeted for detainment and deportation on the borders and interior of the US. Students in this course will acquire the skills to analyze current and changing aspects of immigration enforcement policy and its controversies. Students will also acquire the skills to develop community and organizational strategies to promote social justice including urgent response teams, community education, political actions and the ethics and cultural humility necessary in organizing with immigrant communities around these issues.

Significance of the class and its relationship to social work goals:

This class is based on current policy and current strategies for enforcement and the impact of those actions on workers, families, and communities. Nearly all social workers, no matter what their concentration, will work with or have exposure to undocumented immigrants. The problems and risks associated with being undocumented act as an overarching context to nearly every issue that social workers address and yet are often overlooked or misunderstood as they work with people. Documentation status impacts the experience of people in every system that interfaces with social work including, the schools, child welfare system, criminal justice system, the health system, etc. This class adds knowledge of immigration issues and effective community and organizational responses to enforcement policy to the social worker toolkit. It also provides a basic knowledge for students who may desire jobs that work with immigrants and helping to organize immigrant communities against the social injustices of current immigration enforcement strategies.

Course Objectives:

Students will:

- become conversant with the history of increased immigration enforcement and policy since 911
- understand the causes and consequences of undocumented migration
- be able to identify and assess the language, intent, and extent of current enforcement policies, the strategies and tactics of enforcement, and government entities related to enforcement
- be able to analyze the economic, social, and health impact of enforcement on individuals, families and communities
- be able to assess ethical and culturally sensitive response efforts to address the negative impact of increased immigration enforcement
- be able to use immigrant rights information effectively in community organizing and other activism
- be able to assess current immigration reform policy in relation to ethics related to social justice

Requirement for Academic Credit:

You can choose from these two assignments:

Option 1:

Students must turn in a completed paper within two weeks of the course. To complete the assignment, turn in your paper through Canvas Assignments - Thanks. Write a five page, double spaced, paper reflecting on what you learned in this class and how you anticipate integrating this learning into your perspectives and practice as a social worker. Think about the questions you had and assumptions you were making about undocumented immigrant populations and immigration enforcement before you came into the course, and what has shifted for you as a result of the course. What content had the most impact on your learning and why? What, if anything, has surprised or inspired you? What would you like to know more about? What social work skills have you developed in order to better work with undocumented immigrant populations? Incorporate at least three required readings from the course, and do include those from the list of optional readings if you would like, into your reflection, referencing specific quotes, and include a list of sources at the end.

Option 2: (this option is subject to accessibility or change depending on what WICIR is working on at the moment)

Get involved in a current project of WICIR – in particular, attend a WICIR volunteer orientation or get directly involved via exploring the WICIR face book page. If you go to an orientation, you can choose to get involved with WICIR if you want to (but it is not required for the course), and opportunities to get involved will be mentioned at the orientation. This assignment provides an option to experience active community organizing through attending this orientation with other interested volunteers from the community. Please do the readings to prepare for the course and your activity, but I am not asking you to reference readings for this option

Biographical Sketch of the Instructor:

This course is developed and instructed by Laura Sanders, LMSW:

With a master's degree in social work from the University of Michigan, Laura Sanders has been an instructor in U of M's graduate School of Social Work for 22 years and has practiced for over 28 years as a family therapist in the area. She is a long-time community activist for human rights including those of children, women, TGLBQ people and immigrants. Her work with people is eclectic and creative including advocacy and community organizing. Most recently, she is the co-founder of the Washtenaw Interfaith Coalition for Immigrant Rights, a current and active grassroots organization responding to local ICE raids, detainments and deportations of our immigrant community members, and advocating for immigration reform.

TRIGGER WARNING:

Because this course examines injustice, much of the material is painful in nature, and encourages students to explore and share issues of identity, focusing on imbalances of power, privilege, oppression, and discrimination. It is likely to bring up painful material for some students and very new information for others. Please know that all feelings are acceptable and invited, but students are expected to be respectful to others and able to manage their emotions. As well, personal stories are invited but students should not feel pressured to share painful personal material unless they feel prepared and compelled to do so. There will not be sufficient follow-up for processing painful memories or severe anxiety that might get triggered. In general, it is important that students who expect to struggle seek support and/or therapeutic assistance to work through their own feelings, and/or recovery during their graduate education in order to be present and effective in working with struggling clients. Wounded healers who have worked toward resilience and empowerment make some of the best therapists and organizers. See resources for this below.

Health and Wellness:

Health and wellness situations or circumstances may impede student success within the program. Students should feel free to contact the School's Health and Wellness Advocates, Lauren Davis or Nyshourn Price, at ssw.wellness@umich.edu. Students may also visit/call the University's Counseling and Psychological Services (CAPS). CAPS offers a variety of clinical services, referrals, and workshops. CAPS, Hours: 8am-5pm, 530 S State St., Ann Arbor, MI 48109 caps.umich.edu

Accommodations:

In the era of iPhones, iPads, laptops and wireless networks, some students may wish to spend class time reading email, texting, surfing the web, or doing work for other classes. Please don't do this. If you need a computer as a resource for note-taking please let me know, but I would prefer that they not be open at all. I find that they interfere with discussion and active listening to me and other students. Thanks.

If you need or desire an accommodation for a disability, please let me know soon. The earlier that you make me aware of your needs the more effectively we will be able to use the resources available to us, such as the services for Students with Disabilities, the Adaptive Technology Computing Site and the like. If you do decide to disclose your disability, I will treat that information as private and confidential. Also, please notify me if religious observances conflict with class attendance or due dates for assignments so we can make appropriate arrangements. Also all preferred name and gender pronoun uses will be honored.

Safety and Emergency Preparedness:

In the event of an emergency, dial 9-1-1 from any cell phone or campus phone.

All University of Michigan students, faculty and staff are required to familiarize themselves with emergency procedures and protocols for both inside and outside of the classroom. In the event of possible building closure (i.e. severe weather conditions, public health notices, etc.) you may contact (734)764-SSWB (7793) for up-to-date School closure information.

Be Prepared. Familiarize yourself with the emergency card posted next to the phone in every classroom/meeting room. Review the information on the emergency evacuation sign (located nearest the door) and locate at least (2) emergency exits nearest the classroom.

If you are concerned about your ability to exit the building in the case of an emergency, contact the Office of Student Services and/or email ssw-ADacompliance@umich.edu, Office of Student Services
School of Social Work | Room 1748, 734-936-0961

Organization of the Course Content (Subject to changes)

Day 1

Day one starts with interactive experiences that introduce current issues, myths and facts associated immigrants and migration and an introduction to the local, grassroots organization, the Washtenaw Interfaith Coalition for Immigrant Rights. A brief review of immigration trends especially from Mexico, Central and South America, and policy, post-911, and an introduction to the bodies of government responsible for current immigration enforcement including the missions, activities and strategies of ICE (Immigration and Customs Enforcement) and CBP (Customs and Border Protection) will be explored. We will discuss the process of crossing and apprehension at the U.S. border through guest presentation and understand the current spectrum of immigration raids as illustrated by local documentation of enforcement activities, and a film of the most massive, full-scale, workplace raid in the recent history.

Day 2

Through the exploration of the work of WICIR and community-based research, we will explore the effects of immigration enforcement on children, families and neighborhoods including cases that intersect with local law enforcement and the child welfare system. A pattern of human rights violations associated with raids, detentions and deportations will be explored as well as education efforts that focus on Know Your Rights education for targeted groups and information building for ally communities. Political actions targeting campaigns, sanctuary projects and policies and campaigns will be highlighted as well as a discussion of counseling and advocacy with refugees and immigrant people. We will hear from people in the community who have been affected by immigration enforcement policy and advocates who have been involved in fighting for immigrant rights. We will critically analyze current immigration policy put forth by the Trump administration and efforts in organizing for reform on the local, state and national levels,
