1. Course Statement

a. Course description
This course will introduce students to political social work, which is social work practice, theory, and research that focuses on the use of policy and politics to create social change. Students will gain an understanding of how politics impacts their lives as well as the lives of those served by social workers on both a micro and macro level. This course will prepare students for work in political settings, such as on advocacy and electoral campaigns, as staff for elected officials, and running for office themselves. Students will develop practice skills for policy advocacy and engaging with policymakers, influencing policy agendas, and empowering clients to become politically engaged. Students will critically examine the role of social workers in politics throughout history and the ethics that govern practice in political settings. Finally, students will develop a political engagement plan to facilitate their continued involvement.

b. Course objectives and competencies
In this course, students will learn how to:

● Describe the history of political social work and the field’s engagement in social and political action;
- Describe political social work theories and current research;
- Identify the five domains of political social work and strategies to make change in a variety of practice settings;
- Apply social work research-practice, engagement, assessment, intervention, and evaluation skills to political settings;
- Describe the ethical responsibility of social workers to engage in political social work and explore methods to manage ethical dilemmas;
- Develop skills to engage in electoral, advocacy, and voter engagement campaigns;
- Identify strategies and skills to facilitate discussion across political divides;
- Apply skills for political engagement to advance social, economic, and environmental justice;
- Explore careers in political social work and develop a personal plan for engagement.

c. Course design
This course will use multiple methods including but not limited to: lectures, demonstrations, case studies, readings, guest speakers, discussions, written assignments, individual and group exercises. The course will be offered primarily in person with the possibility of a flipped-class or hybrid structure.

d. Intensive focus on PODS
This course integrates PODS content and skills with a special emphasis on the identification of theories, practice and/or policies that promote social justice, illuminate injustices and are consistent with scientific and professional knowledge. Through the use of a variety of instructional methods, this course will support students developing a vision of social justice, learn to recognize and reduce mechanisms that support oppression and injustice, work toward social justice processes, apply intersectionality and intercultural frameworks and strengthen critical consciousness, self-knowledge and self-awareness to facilitate PODS learning.

Issues related to privilege, oppression, diversity, and social justice will be explored through a political lens. This course will focus on providing students with the tools to advance social justice through engagement in policy and politics. Students will gain skills to engage marginalized groups and those typically excluded from the political process in making change in their communities.
2. Class Requirements

a. Text and class materials

All materials will be provided on Canvas. Students are expected to have completed all assigned readings prior to class. Readings may be changed due to visits by guest lecturers, special circumstances, and student needs. I will aim to make any changes to readings two weeks in advance.

Your Political Social Work Present
In this assignment, you will select three activities to engage in that fall within one or more of the political social work domains:

1. Engaging individuals and communities in political processes
2. Influencing policy agendas and decision-making
3. Engaging with political parties
4. Holding professional and political staff positions
5. Engaging with electoral campaigns
6. Seeking and holding elected office

All three activities may be within the same domain or you may engage in different ones. After you engage in the activity, complete a 1 to 2 page double spaced paper or 3 to 7 minute video/audio recording that covers the following:

- Overview of the activity
- Your reasoning for selecting it
- What you learned and how you will apply it
- The value of social workers being involved in the activity

Some examples of activities can include:

- Participating in a voter registration drive
- Participating in a voter education event
- Contacting one of your elected officials about a policy area of interest
- Attending a political party meeting
- Volunteering on a campaign

You have the whole semester to complete this assignment, but I recommend that you space them out so you do not get overwhelmed.

For extra credit, you may complete additional "Your Political Social Work Present" assignments. You may complete as many of these as you would like.

Your Political Social Work Future

Complete a 3 to 4 page double spaced paper or 6 to 10-minute video/audio recording that answers the following questions:

1. What was the most impactful lesson that you learned in class?
2. What was the most impactful action that you took as a result of the class? This may be an activity that you engaged in from assignment 2 or something else.
3. How has what you learned and did this semester changed your thinking about political engagement and social work’s role in politics?
4. In what ways will you continue to be politically engaged?

d. Attendance and class participation

Both class attendance and active purposeful participation in class discussion and activities are paramount for the successful completion of this course. This course covers a content domain that is extensive, and given the time framework of the course each class moves quickly in discussing information.
