Excerpt 1: How to Improve Program .................................................... 28
Introduction

This report is a summary of youth exit data from the 2020 Grow Detroit’s Young Talent (GDYT) program. Although the program has been in existence in its current form for nearly a decade, 2020 was a year like no other. With COVID-19 lingering for months as a global pandemic threatening public health and safety, implementing staff made the decision to shift this year’s program almost entirely on-line with a virtual job shadowing component and a social emotional learning component.

Growing the workforce participation of Detroit’s young people can reduce financial barriers and provide them with the skills, knowledge, and opportunities to start building a career. This year, more than ever, it was important to ensure that young workers have access to work opportunities so that they can continue to support themselves and their families. In May of 2020, the unemployment rate grew to 24% nationally with youth unemployment growing to 26.9% reflecting the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic1. Comparatively, in Detroit, unemployment grew from 7.6% in February to 39.4% in May making it the third most impacted city by the pandemic with respect to unemployment2.

Working collaboratively with the Data, Research, & Evaluation committee of the Detroit Youth Employment Consortium, we cut questions from last year’s survey that were no longer relevant and added a set of questions related to technology and the new virtual context. 2,440 youth participants gave their comments and opinions via an on-line survey link. The responses provide feedback directly from youth participants and offer data that contributes to the ongoing work of GDYT as staff plan for the summer of 2021, which is still unlikely to be in person for most youth.

Questions focus on what skills were developed or enhanced by participating in GDYT, including basic job readiness and confidence as well as new areas such a use of video conference technology. We also ask about any previous work experience and whether they identified a trusted adult to keep in touch with for future mentorship. There are questions on educational expectations and financial capability as well as whether they expect to stay in Michigan as adults. We asked about their experience with the pay card and how they accessed technology to participate in the virtual activities. And finally, we asked about referrals to support services and overall satisfaction with the program.

Qualitative data provide insight into what the youth hoped to be doing in terms of careers, suggestions for improvement, how COVID-19 has affected them personally and what new insights they have had about themselves. Given that the majority of young people (55%) said they don’t expect to live in Michigan as adults, we summarize some of their reasons for this response.

Highlights:

- Device used to access GDYT was mostly laptop (68%) or smartphone (56%).
- Although most youth already had a device (66%), 13% received one via the Detroit Connected Futures program and 21% from GDYT or their worksite.
- Most (95%) did not have any challenges participating from their device.
- Most (97%) accessed GDYT from home, but 2% said they used a public space.
- Although most would prefer in-person work (43%), they were comfortable with the online experience and only 18% expressed interest only if there were no other option.
- The majority (67%) said that GDYT helped them use video conference technology.
- Educational expectations are high, 58% of youth expect to attend a 2-year or 4-year college and 26% expect to attend graduate/professional school.
- About a third (36%) said their career goals changed after GDYT.
- Two-thirds of the youth said they had worked for pay before in the past, but this was the first GDYT experience for many (41%).
- Almost everyone received a pay card (92%) and only a few (16%) didn’t like it.
- Ten percent or more said they needed support for the following: mental health (13%), health (10%), food (12%), benefits (14%) and college prep (38%).
- Overall satisfaction was 94%.

Despite the pandemic and most activities being entirely virtual, responses were similar to what we have heard from youth in past summers. However, there are a few exceptions where this year’s results seem distinct. This year fewer youth established a relationship with a trusted adult (78% in 2020 vs. 83% in 2019), perhaps because the virtual experience provided less opportunity for individual interaction with staff. Youth were more likely to say their understanding of a range of work readiness skills improved. Youth said GDYT helped them understand jobs I like (75% in 2020 vs. 65% in 2019), skills I need (75% in 2020 vs. 65% in 2019), education I need (74% in 2020 vs. 63% in 2019), and have a clear idea of jobs I want (73% in 2020 vs. 65% in 2019). In addition, more youth reported starting to budget their money (84% in 2020 vs. 78% in 2019). Surprisingly, fewer youth said they expected to live in Michigan at age 25 (44% in 2020 vs. 54% in 2019). We highlight responses to this question at the end of the report to get a better sense of the reasons offered for this result.

There is much to learn from what youth participants in GDYT have to say. We have been producing these annual reports from youth exit surveys for over a decade. Direct Quotes

Better Communication

♦ “By having me communicate with real people that works in my career field”

♦ “It should’ve been clear guidelines on what to do and what is expected, the huddles should have been related to the actual work we were doing and not be due the same day”

More Time

♦ “Have more time to do some work and take like activities that require us to deal with money”

♦ “To make GDYT better my call could have been later in the week so I could have a chance to do the work.”
Direct Quotes, con’t.

More Targeted/Personal

- “Teaching us more about how life works and how we have to manage it”
- “Speakers in break out rooms to do one on one questions”
- “Finding a way to keep the quieter people more engaged”
- “I feel GDYT would have been a better experience for me if we had a better way to connect to others. Using Zoom is ok but when singing like we do at Mosaic Youth Theatre of Detroit lag is a problem when trying to sing together.”
- “Have a separate program for students in college.”

Better Engagement

- “It felt like a lot of content, which is good to an extent but at times sort of felt like school. Maybe more diverse ways in educating us/helping us learn.”

Praises for GDYT Staff

- “I appreciate the online experience Mr. B and Mrs. C from Matrix Center are excellent.”
- “Have more people like Ms. Z from the Matrix Center run our GDYT jobs every year!!! She’s amazing! I love her! She helped me understand everything super clearly!
- “Not much it was a lot of fun and I learned a lot about things I didn’t even know I needed to learn about.”

Meet in Person

- “If I had physical work in a safe environment half of the time and computer work the other half”
- “I’m a hands on learner, so the only thing better would be to do it in person. Sadly, there was a pandemic this year.”
- Socially distanced outings
General Suggestion

- “Given the circumstances, we were not able to meet in person, however, in my position my coworkers and supervisors still created an amazing work environment. The only suggestion would be to alter the way we do SEL on virtual job shadow.”

- “By using Google meet rather than Zoom meeting.”

- “Let us choose which meeting from the guest speaker we want”

*Larger text represents frequency of response
Since the start of the COVID-19 pandemic, what insights have you had about yourself that will be beneficial for you in the future?

- That I’ll do something even if I don’t want to
- I learned that I struggled with people and I began working toward being more confident and comfortable when I am given the chance to be social.
- I can get through anything.
- My spiritual awakening.
- I have started learning ASL (American Sign Languages) on YouTube and looking up classes to take.
- I struggle saving money so I need to work on it.
- I’d much rather be around someone than alone.
- I made sure to put my mental state first before anything.
- I learned that I work better when I prepare myself beforehand.

Since the start of the COVID-19 pandemic, what insights have you had about yourself that will be beneficial for you in the future?

- Need to do things you always wanted to do.
- That I can push through things and do certain things I wouldn’t normally be okay with.
- I think that I need to be kinder to myself, more patient with myself, keep working to gain a greater level of confidence.
- Studying harder to help me become a better student.
- I could say I’ve learned to be more careful, and I’ve learned to make more smart decisions.
- I can cook.
- Probably that I cannot live with a large group of people, but also that due to a coming change in the economy, I need to acquire more skills in order to be competitive in the job market.
- I like to split my personal and professional life to avoid biases.
- I’m very good at computing.
