TENURE-TRACK POSITIONS

The Brown School with outstanding graduate programs in social work, public health, and social policy at Washington University in St. Louis, seeks exceptional early career candidates for up to four tenure-track faculty positions. We are seeking candidates with strong commitment to transformative scholarship, which advances social, health, economic, environmental and racial justice, innovative educational approaches and mutually beneficial partnerships. We particularly encourage applications from individuals with expertise in one or more of the following priority areas aligned with the Brown School strategic plan, Driving Equity 2030: health policy, environmental policy, social welfare policy, child welfare, data science and biostatistics, global research, and community-driven science.

The school provides a vibrant, highly collaborative environment that supports innovative transdisciplinary research through a network of research centers and institutes and excellence in teaching to achieve social impact. Faculty conduct groundbreaking research on mental health, child maltreatment, dissemination and implementation, global economic, social and community development, health and social welfare policy, epidemiology, the built environment and health, health disparities, and public health systems science. Together with Washington University’s world-class School of Medicine and campus-wide Institute for Public Health, the Brown School is a dynamic environment for transdisciplinary research and social problem-solving.

Candidates should have an earned doctorate in a relevant field to one or more of our priority areas; competence to teach at the master’s and Ph.D. levels; and commitment to conduct high-level research, including the production of scholarly publications and preparation of research proposals for external funding. Diversity, equity, and inclusion are core values at Washington University, and strong candidates will demonstrate the ability to create inclusive classrooms and environments in which a diverse array of students can learn and thrive.

Salary and rank will be commensurate with experience. To apply, candidates should create a profile at http://apply.interfolio.com/95636 and complete the application process. Applications should include a cover letter, curriculum vitae, research and teaching statement, a diversity, equity, and inclusion statement, and the names and contact information of three references. Early application is encouraged, and will be accepted until the positions are filled.

An Equal Opportunity and Affirmative Action Employer

Washington University in St. Louis is committed to the principles and practices of equal employment opportunity and especially encourages applications by those underrepresented in their academic fields. It is the University’s policy to recruit, hire, train, and promote persons in all job titles without regard to race, color, age, religion, sex, sexual orientation, gender identity or expression, national origin, protected veteran status, disability, or genetic information.